First day of college is as exciting and memorable as any other days in everybody's life, and that is the same with me, as I will never be able to forget the first day of my college. There are various things which make such days remember able and in my case it was my first class which made the first day so much horrible that I was unable to forget it. It was the first so the excitement was at its peak and I was awake far earlier than before and got prepared to take my conveyance and reached by colleges.

The first day I went inside the medical college excitingly. Entering the college itself was a new experience because coming from schools where there were strict rules and regulations so the college seemed to be slightly student favoring. I came to the class and found that no one was in the room as I was the first one; I took my seat, placed my bag and went downstairs to make the survey of the entire college. Soon that happiness was ended because there was no reception and no one to guide. I went to the notice board to find out if there is any help I could get. I did find myself lucky as it was mentioned there that all new comers will gather for a group photo. It is a common perception that medicine department is occupied mostly by girls.

There were new faces and a new place was slightly confusing but still it was charming as I was in my college life now. We were having co-education so there were girls and boys both in our class. In our group of almost 24 students only 3 were male including me. Then we were rushed to the auditorium for the speech of Dean. The speech is quiet motivational it ended soon and finally we got ready to attend the first lecture. Those two guys other than me became my friends. The teacher came and announced that they were going to test our basic scientific knowledge with a quiz let me be honest, we males were less interested and enjoyed the class by sitting at the back. After a while the bell rang and the recess starts we went to cafeteria which was filled by girls but we ended up in failure as we couldn't get anything.

Soon the recess got over, I went to bus stand taking a lot of memories suddenly a heavy rain fall occurs. We were busy in enjoying the rain and we didn't notice the arrival of bus. All the females rushed to the bus. It was too late and we couldn't catch the bus. We ended up with wet clothes and a complicated day ended up with a lot of memories.
